SOME EDITORIAL OPINIONS OF BRUSH AND PENCIL

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is one of the best publications devoted to art published to-day. Its articles are always in line with the accepted tenets of modern art, and its illustrated designs are of the most informing character."—Philadelphia Item.

"The superlative excellence of the reflection of current arts and crafts by BRUSH AND PENCIL is always to be depended upon."—Boston Globe.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL, the Chicago art magazine, is supplying a distinct want long felt by art students. There is a lack of literature dealing with the development and achievements of American art, and this attractive publication is endeavoring to meet that need. Biographical and critical articles regularly appear, while reports of exhibitions, doings of art clubs, and art movements, in all lines, are given space. It is typographically handsome, and its illustrations are admirable."—Indianapolis Journal.

"A unique publication and one that will come as an aid in many ways to the schools."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL ranks with any magazine of art selling for the same price, or a little more even. While it is but 25 cents, it is not easy to see wherein it is specially weaker than the several 35-cent art magazines."—Hoboken Newsdealer.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is one of the best art magazines in the country, and a credit to Chicago."—The Epworth Herald.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL has been, since its inception, an exemplification of that which is good, not only in the art graphic but in the art typographic."—Des Moines (Iowa) Ledger.

"A valuable magazine for those interested in the progress and development of art and, while of interest to the artist, is not too far in advance of the needs of the student."—St. John's (N. F.) Globe.

"The best-known artists lend their productions to this periodical and find perfect parallels in the excellent accompanying articles. Its appearance is an inspiration to new ideas and better work."—Book Notes.

MORE EDITORIAL OPINIONS OF BRUSH AND PENCIL

"BRUSH AND PENCIL improves with each issue, and is a periodical which is not only useful to the student, because of its practical suggestions, but which, because of the artistic merit and beauty of its illustrations, should find a place in every household."—Terre Haute Gazette.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL displays enterprise and unflinching taste."—Canadian Magazine.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is ideally perfect in form and replete with delicate illustrations. The literary contents are exceptional."—Evening Herald, St. John's, N. F.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is charmingly illustrated. The pictures are always a notable feature of this publication, whose editor evidently has his entire heart in his work."—Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL, now among the foremost of all journals, presents a notable feast of good matter, and is richly and profusely illustrated."—Sacramento Record-Union.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is a triumph of pictorial art."—Chicago Daily News.

"As a magazine graveyard, Chicago's reputation is pretty good; but in this, as in many other things, New York remains the banner city. This is particularly true of art magazines. It is, therefore, with real pleasure that one notes the stiffening grip of BRUSH AND PENCIL, of Chicago, an illustrated journal of the arts and crafts, and an art monthly of exceptional excellence."—The Washington Times.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL is always an interesting exponent of American art. The criticisms of current exhibits are notably just and refreshing."—Church Standard.

"BRUSH AND PENCIL, an illustrated magazine of the arts of to-day, is, as befits its title, artistically beautiful in appearance and a competent exponent of the arts of which it treats. Artists and those interested in art will find it a valuable periodical."—Boston Transcript.
